Going the extra mile to care for kids

Kosair Children's pediatric services now available in Bowling Green

Each year Kosair Children's Hospital provides care for hundreds of thousands of children throughout the region. What many people may not know is the borders of the hospital stretch far and wide when it comes to providing that special brand of care that's "Just for Kids." That care now expands to Bowling Green with the opening of the Kosair Children's Outpatient Center on The Medical Center campus.

"We're privileged to be not only the place for pediatric care in our own community, but for most of the areas of the state and parts of Southern Indiana," said Thomas D. Kmetz, President of Kosair Children's Hospital. "Our hospital and medical center locations here in the Louisville Metro area are convenient for many families, but it is just as important that we continue to expand our presence throughout Kentucky." Opening the Bowling Green center delivers on that commitment.

Approximately two dozen physicians from University of Louisville Pediatrics will see patients in the new facility. The outpatient center will offer the expertise of pediatricians specializing in endocrinology, gastroenterology, cardiology and pulmonology, and is open for patient visits Monday through Friday.

"The goal of being in Bowling Green is to make sure we're providing the best possible care to children regardless of where they live," said Charlotte Ipsan, RNC, MSN, NNP-BC, System Vice President, Pediatric Services, and Vice President of Administration for Kosair Children's Medical Center – Brownsboro. "By being able to see and treat children in their communities, we can help keep families together and closer to home."

"This is an example of a true collaboration with the shared goal of increasing children's access to specialty medical care," said Josh Honaker, M.D., FAAP, Chief, University of Louisville Division of General Pediatrics. "Our physician practices are excited by the opportunity to see patients in this new location."
